- SOURCE: Zoutpansberger

#CITYATTACK - Three men gained access to Uncle George's yard by first bending open their palisade fence and climbing through to avoid the electric fence over the top. They then opened a small window that had to be replaced recently and had not yet had burglar proofing in front. The smallest of the three climbed in, after which he walked to the kitchen and unlocked the kitchen door for his companions. "I woke up to a light shining in my eyes. They were already in the bedroom. i," Aunt Ann told the Zoutpansberger on Tuesday. The three men were wearing balaclava and gloves. One was standing on Aunt Ann's side of the bed, the other at the foot and the other next to Uncle George, who was still sleeping. "Then I shouted to my husband, 'There are people in the room!'" Uncle George woke up. He hears hard because he wears an earpiece. The man next to Aunt Ann said to her, "We want your money!".He had a piece of rope ready to tie her hands. "When the rope went over my fingers, I snatched my hand away and sat down on it," Aunt Ann said. At that point, Uncle George decided no one was touching his wife and jumped up. "A voice said in Afrikaans,

'Give us your money or I'll shoot you!' Likewise..." said Aunt Ann. With that, the man pressed a pistol against Uncle George's chest, right where his heart is. "When I saw the guy, I decided I wasn't going to leave him. Then I hit him with my fist! He definitely felt it because he was staging backwards like that," Uncle George said. With the man reeling, he pulled off a shot. Fortunately for Uncle George, he stooped Uncle George, in turn, remained quite calm, sat down on his bed, and called for help by phone. "Within five minutes, the neighbourhood watch and my son were here. "He shot me from about a foot away. I just felt something so 'thumping' against my chest. It didn't hurt, nothing," Uncle George said.
